World Harmony Starts With You and Me

By Terri Bosner

People are talking about the recent wars and natural disasters in our world, and they are all wondering the same thing: How do we create harmony and peace on our planet?

It starts with you and me: If we want harmony and peace in the world, we must create harmony and peace within ourselves first. We cannot create a peaceful world populated by angry and unhappy people, and we cannot create peace through war; it will not work.

How, then, do we create peace and harmony from within? I have a few ideas, and I decided to talk with Toronto-based scientific intuitive and healer Bryan Farnum, to see if he had any answers for me and the thousands of Canadians who are curious as well.

Bryan has what he calls the gift of discernment. You can look at Bryan as a truth oracle: he is able to discern what is happening and confirm the reason for it. Bryan uses his gift in the areas of science, medicine and peace. He sees people with health problems, works to educate scientists through a syndicated radio show: Healthy talk radio.com. He has been doing intuitive research for six years now, with Professor McKay, a member of the University of Toronto medical faculty staff at the University of Toronto and advises world leaders around the globe on ways to find peaceful solutions to problems.

I've recently had a couple of opportunities to talk with Bryan and get to know him a little. He is a humble, sincere and honest man, blunt when he is discerning truth; these are some of the reasons I respect him. Once a month in Toronto, Bryan is planning to get together with health food storeowners and workers. He will answer all questions about any subject concerning health, health products, why they are good for us and how they work in the body. This not only gets information out to the public, it also gives people an opportunity to see how Bryan really can discern truth. Within a couple of months, Bryan will be doing his own internet radio show in Canada, which will give him the freedom to say whatever he wants to about health, science and world issues, within reason.

"The way to find peace and harmony from within is by living in a state of unconditional love and forgiveness," Bryan explained. "If we can do this, as Canadian people, we will elect leaders of like mind and like heart. If the people, collectively, of Canada, and worldwide, could learn to love unconditionally and forgive unconditionally, we would have less chaos, less fear of the future and we would not have the wars that we have been seeing. I believe that if governments allowed this message to be spoken freely, if people were able to be taught this truth, then world harmony and peace is possible. The real problem, is, approximately 70% of world leaders are corrupted.”

I am concerned not only by man-made wars, but also natural disasters that are plaguing many parts of our planet. Hurricanes, earthquakes and floods are causing much destruction and suffering in the world. As a Buddhist, I believe in Karma. The Christians say, “You reap what you have sown.” I asked Bryan if he had any explanation for what is going on.

Bryan said, “All of life is based on a universal program that’s based on math and the laws of Cause and Effect. We have a tendency to blame God for everything. What happens is, for example, the pain that has been inflicted on the people of Iraq, should forgive everyone unconditionally every night before we go to bed. If we don’t clear out these negative emotions, at night they get transferred to our soul or Junk DNA and then through time we suffer imbalance and eventually disease. And we really have to encourage our Canadian politicians to get this truth out to the world by allowing spiritual projects to be government funded, to act from the heart, not from the mind, and encourage them not to be intimidated by foreign governments. Politicians can protect Canadians from foreign intimidation by allowing government by referendums. Referendums would allow Canadians to be heard and would give our leaders an “out” when dealing with the policies of the current U.S. Administration. What people don’t really understand is the influence the U.S. has on Canada, particularly economically. It has a lot of silent indirect influence on the Bank of Canada.

I cannot share with the public. If it is Gods will, it will happen. I’m asking all readers to pray for me because it is not going to be easy. There are world leaders who are power and greed-motivated and who have little value for human life. They will get whatever they want at any cost. So we, as Canadians, have to be able to really stand firm in saying No to war, and we must do this with love. There is not one person that I do not know on a deep soul level... even the President of the United States, with all that he has done, I love him very much.”

I believe prayer and meditation can help shape our future. But I also believe we must act from the heart as well. I asked Bryan to share his ideas about this.

“There is truth to the idea that we can change a potential outcome through prayer and meditation,” Bryan said, “but what people don’t understand is that we have to take an active part in speaking up against their negative emotions - anger, bitterness and so on - this is released in an energy form outside of their bodies. This energy will come together in a balloon shape and through time it will actually pop and create a weather disturbance. The hurricanes that have happened recently in the U.S. are directly connected to the Iraq war and the ill treatment of the Iraqi people by the coalition forces. The recent hurricanes are direct messages to the American people that they need to take a hard look at their current government and current foreign policies. Man with weather technology is able to speed up the hurricane process.”

I believe prayer and meditation go together so well because when I pray, I speak to my Creator, and when I meditate or sit in silence, it is an opportunity to hear from my Creator. All the answers are in the silence. I believe a lot of that exchange happens within the heart. I asked Bryan to comment on these ideas.

Bryan responded, “When someone speaks to you, it is your heart that is receiving and processing that information. Most people don’t realize that our Junk DNA houses 1% of our soul. Many scientists, through ignorance, have discounted Junk DNA as being useless. The soul or Junk DNA retains long-term memory of unresolved issues, trauma, etc. If you do not apply spiritual healing into your life, through time, you can bring disease into the body, by not clearing our ill memory from our Junk DNA. This is why we

So, our Prime Minister, God bless him, would have to be very careful with how he speaks up against the U.S. Administration, knowing that the administration is one that shows no compassion for the existence of mankind. They use CNN to deceive the world. I’m being very blunt, but all you have to do is look at recent decisions where the U.S. has gone against the United Nations and gone into a war that was based on untruths. It seems like nothing bothers people, we just accept that the U.S. President can intimidate other world leaders and get his own way. So referendums can give every Canadian a voice and can be a very good out for our Canadian politicians, so they don’t have to go along with the war policies of the current U.S. Administration. Unknown to many, since George W. Bush has taken office, the American people have lost 96% of their overall freedom. They have witnessed one blunder after another at a massive cost. Referendums will keep Canadians free.”

I was born and raised in Saskatchewan and I am a proud Canadian. I have traditionally thought of Canada as a peace-keeper in the world, but I am concerned that Canada is beginning to stray from this noble distinction. I asked Bryan if he has requested a meeting with our Prime Minister.

Bryan told me, “Yes, but he has not met with me yet. I’ve had 3 turndowns so far. I’m hoping he will meet with me because I have a very important message for him that corruption. We must be willing to accept the truth and be prepared to hear the worst and know that there is a bigger picture. I would suggest volunteering. But find a group that has a good cause and volunteer with an unconditional state of forgiveness and an unconditional state of love. Do it for a good reason, do it for mankind. Do it from the heart and your blessings will be abundant. When you speak truth, there is nothing to fear.”

I think it’s clear: World harmony starts with you and me. We must forgive and love, unconditionally. We can pray and meditate from the heart. And we must take an active part in creating a peaceful world. I encourage you all to contact your Member of Parliament and urge them to say Yes to peace and urge all of them to denounce publicly the current US foreign policy.
